

I resourced the Leobro holographic glitter from Amazon as per the handout which came from Phil Irons AAW Symposium presentation. I didn't even try the UK company and, as I admitted to being cheap and lazy, looked no further than Amazon.

Phil lists the materials he uses and the same ones I showed last night. Never tried anything else. If it works for the pros, it works for me. See personal testimony above.

Currently $12.99 for 15 sample bottles and 10 measuring spoons.

www.metal-inlay.com for the very fine powdered metal www.tedsokolowski.com for videos and more metal inlay products.

<https://sokolowskistudios.com/>

<https://bigislandengraving.com/> Is my source of butterflies, router template, router bits, etc. Never looked anywhere else.

<https://bigislandengraving.com/butterfly-inlay-repair-system/>.

The link above will take you to the router set up and the installation videos.

<https://trentboschtools.com/product/trent-bosch-versatile-carving-stand/> Currently $185 plus shipping from Colorado

Hope this answers everyone's questions. If not, let me know.

I enjoyed the group and the questions. Hope they got their admissions fee's worth out of it.

A member was sharing photos of a bowl he made with stones set into the rim. I mentioned a local lapidary shop for stones such as turquoise <https://jerrysrockandgem.com/>.